News from Kruse

by Billie Childress & Angie Sadauskas

In an article entitled "Interesting Shrubs" published in the May 1939 Bulletin, publication of The Garden Clubs of America, the witch hazel and fothergilla are extolled for their hardiness and ornamental value. That opinion is echoed by gardeners and horticultural experts today. The American Gardener magazine, official publication of the American Horticultural Society, Nov/Dec 2012 issue, has an extensive article on "Enchanting Witch Hazels." The author says "few shrubs pack more punch in the winter landscape than witch hazels, which bear delicate fragrant flowers on a sculptural frame of bare branches." Large, low maintenance shrubs are valuable structural additions to any garden. This time of year the value of garden bones (trees & shrubs) are evident and the Kruse Garden could use a few more bones to fill out the skeleton. A fothergilla shrub was added to the back garden a few years ago and it is doing well, but we don't have any witch hazels. Both of these shrubs have 3 season interest with early spring flowers to fabulous fall color. It's apparent that a shrub recommendation that endures for 75 years is a solid bet. We're convinced that a witch hazel would be a grand addition to the back garden!

Another Bulletin, September 1953 , "Garden Suggestions" declared the following: "Gardeners accumulate all sorts of tools, many of which never leave the tool house. Don't be deceived by a light wheelbarrow. Use the old-fashioned heavy one with a rubber tire if you can get one. Its weight makes it easier to push than those flighty new metal ones, whose handles are too short anyway." The author goes on to advise "move through your work at a deliberate pace. Most gardeners look as though they were on a slow-up strike. Once you have decided the 'musts' in your garden, consult the authorities. Slapdash gardening, whether in layout, planting, maintenance, or material, is wickedly expensive of time and effort. I do not count my labor, which I regard as income in health and contentment." We know Bertha Kruse and her sisters were avid gardeners concurrent with this publication. One wonders if they shared these thoughts and philosophy. Something to ponder.

While the garden is dormant we will be using our time wisely to consult the experts... Garden Club members are top on our list.

You may consider the wisdom of this advice as well. A&B

Book Review by Elaine McCluskey

To help get through the dark and cold of winter while thinking about being in the garden, I recently read Writing in the Garden: A Literary Conversation Across Two Centuries. This small book accompanied the 2011 exhibition organized by the New York Library Society called Writing the Garden: Books from the Collections of the New York Society Library & Elizabeth Barlow Rogers. The author, Elizabeth Barlow Rogers, is president of the Foundation for Landscape Studies and founding president of the Central Park Conservancy. She crafted the book by looking at writers in several categories, including: Women in the Garden, Travelers in the Garden, Spouses in the Garden, and Humorists in the Garden.

In the section on Correspondents in the Garden, she notes how the sending of paper letters from person such as Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Thomas Jefferson provided historical accounts of gardening in an informal way. Described in this same section is New Yorker editor Katherine White's (wife of E.B. White of Charlotte's Web) correspondence with nurserymen and seed suppliers as well as other garden writers. Such correspondence often discussed differences between gardening in two different locales in the U.S. or between the U.S. and other countries.

In the closing section on Philosophers in the Garden, Ms. Rogers notes that in fifth century B.C., Socrates held his classes in a stoa—a colonnaded structure in Athens, while Plato's academy outside Athens could be the prototype for university quadrangles in later ages. She devotes a long section to Michael Pollan, writer and journalism professor at University of California, Berkeley, and his well-known writing on industrial food production in the U.S. (FYI, Dr. Pollan will be speaking at Elmhurst College on April 28 at 7 p.m. on Cooked: A Natural History of Transformation, http://public.elmhurst.edu/cultural_events)

The book is enhanced with line drawings and beautiful photographs from the works described in the text. There's a full bibliography that lets the reader go further to find more about this group of writers that Ms. Rogers notes were as good with their trowel as they were with their pen. The book is available through inter-library loan from the West Chicago Public Library.

Mosaic Bowling Ball Workshop—Angie Sadauskas

Eleven garden club members participated in the mosaic bowling ball workshop in January at Billie Childress' residence. Working with the same basic materials the finished balls were all individual and unique in composition and color.

The finished garden ornaments will be on display at the garden club meeting in February.

Are You Losing Your Ash? by Heather Prince of The Growing Place

Many of us are facing the loss of a tree, either from emerald ash borer, storm damage, drought or other factors. As you think about whether to replace lost trees or add more to your yard, consider their many benefits.

Trees afford us beauty, shade, framework for your landscape, as well as food and shelter for countless birds, butterflies and wildlife. Trees can feed us with their fruits and berries. Trees clean the air, conserve water, and reduce runoff. As you may have noticed this past hot summer, trees do a remarkable job of keeping us cool.

The U.S. Forest Service has found that three well-placed shade trees can reduce the annual heating and cooling costs of an Illinois house by 6.5%. Large deciduous shade trees are best planted on the south side of the building to offer optimal shade from the hot midday sun in summer, but still allow winter light to warm the structure. The Growing Place recommends oaks, elms, tulip poplar and maples among other types of trees for this purpose. To block the lower afternoon sun, add small deciduous trees to the west of the home. Some species to consider for this area would be serviceberries, magnolias, crabapples, and redbud. In fact, small trees or shrubs sited to shade your air conditioner will allow it to operate more efficiently. Plants should be at least three feet away from the unit to allow for proper airflow. Plus, trees and shrubs can hide the unit, creating a more pleasing landscape. Evergreen trees can offer an effective wind-break from our blustery winter winds when planted on the north and northwest corners of the property. Spruce, arborvitae, and pine can be particularly effective in this spot.

Find out more about emerald ash borer (EAB), trees, pruning, and more at The Growing Place's Opening Day Event on Saturday, March 23 at their Aurora location. Start the day at 9:30 with a free tree giveaway to the first 150 people. The Morton Arboretum will speak at 10:00 am about the latest scientific information on EAB management options for your home, including help with identification, treatment options, and replacement selection. In the afternoon, join The Growing Place for tool sharpening demonstrations, greenhouse tours, and pruning advice. Celebrate with a discount on bare root tree pre-orders. In-store landscape coaching appointments are available all day for a fee. Call 630-355-4000 or email landscape@thegrowingplace.com to sign up. $50 fee includes coupon towards a plant purchase.
